

DIAGRAM FOR BLOWING SAFE FOUND IN COLLINS'S CELL.

Convicted Murderer of Pinkerton Detective and Pal of Bill Rudolph Most Troublesome Prisoner Ever Kept in St. Louis Jail—Constant Vigilance Frustrates Three Attempts at Rescue, and Several Times Saws Have Been Found in Prisoner's Possession.

Hidden between the leaves of a magazine in the cell occupied by George Collins, convicted murderer and safe-blower and partner of the recently captured "Bill" Rudolph, Jailer Dawson, who has had much trouble in guarding his prisoner, yesterday found a diagram showing how to blow a safe. Collins admits having made it during his leisure hours.

On a plain sheet of white paper, hardly 5 by 8 inches, it tells of the art of crackmanship and burglary in terse style.

"All that is needed to get a 'jug' is 'soup' soap, fuse and cap and cotton." Is Collins's philosophy, which is painted neatly under the diagram of a safe. "Soup" is a term used by safe-blowers meaning nitroglycerin. His drawing shows how to use the material, and is made with only a few strokes of pencil, which show considerable mechanical skill.

The simplicity of the drawing shows how little Collins thinks of "pulling off a job." Since his imprisonment he has boasted that he could crack a safe quicker than he could tell about it.

Neatly grouped about the safe, which is shown charged with nitroglycerin, ready to be exploded, are the necessities of the burglar's craft. Each instrument is numbered, and its use explained in a few words.

USE OF INSTRUMENTS.

About the door of a safe, short lines drawn diagonally across the sash show where the soap plays a part in getting "the jug" or booty. It fills the crack and prevents nitroglycerin, which is poured in a cup at the top, also made of soap, from escaping. A like cup at the bottom holds the fuse. A bottle, with the fluid streaming into the receptacle at the top of the safe door, shows how to charge the safe for blowing.

Figures from 1 to 20 suffice for Collins to show how every thing is done. For instance, No. 19, a bottle of nitroglycerin, is marked, showing how much is needed for a vault, safe or extra strong box. No. 9, shows a combination puller, which fits over the handle of the door. No. 10 shows a leather cap hammer, which is used by safe crackers in order to reduce noise to a minimum.

Collins has been the most gentlemanly prisoner the St. Louis authorities have ever had to deal with. Since the escape of "Bill" Rudolph, last summer, everything in connection with Collins's life in the jail has been kept comparatively quiet.

On several occasions stories of attempts to rescue him were printed in meager form, but that has changed, and now being made at all times since his imprisonment, no time has been wasted in attempting to fix the responsibility for his escape. For Rudolph was not assigned to any particular guard, and the police were aware of his escape.

Since that time, however, so numerous were the plots to try and liberate Collins that it was thought best to place him under a special guard, a practice never before resorted to.

MISSOURI MAN ASSAULTED.

Jas. Mooney, United Mine Workers' Official, Beaten.

Trinidad, Colo., Feb. 14.—William Fairly and James Mooney, members of the National Board of United Mine Workers of America, from Alabama and Missouri, respectively, were waylaid to-day on the road between Monticello and Bowen, dragged from their buggy and beaten by eight men with stones and revolvers, and left lying in the road.

After awhile they were able to get into their buggy and drive to Bowen. Subsequently they were brought to Trinidad.

Mooney was seriously injured and had to be taken to a hospital.

Fairly was able to go to his hotel. No arrests have yet been made.

This is the first time since the coal mine strike was inaugurated, on November 9, that any of the officials of the United Mine Workers have been assaulted. It is reported that the men who attacked them were guards at the coal mines.

GAVE MONEY TO STRANGER.

Tale of Threatened Robbery Lost $390 for McCrossan.

Thirty minutes after his arrival at Union Station Saturday morning Daniel McCrossan, a farmer, 65 years old, residing near Courtland, Kas., had lost $390, he says, he was induced to give to a man who gave the name of William Griffith, on the pretext that there was great danger of being robbed.

McCrossan reported the matter to the police yesterday. He said that he met Griffith at Hot Springs, where he had been for his health. When he departed from Hot Springs, he said, Griffith told him he was also coming to St. Louis.

At Union Station, he said, he met a man who gave the name of Wilson. The men broke into a restaurant near Union Station, Griffith, McCrossan said, persuaded him to give the money to him.

FR. COFFEY OPPOSES SEGREGATION PLAN.

Priest Declares in Lecture at the Odeon That Religion Must Curb Social Evil.

STRIKES AT DANCE HALLS.

Politicians and the Police Denounced Before the First Church of Spiritual Unity.

Dance halls with saloon attachments were denounced in a lecture by the Reverend James T. Coffey last night. Politics and the police came in for their share of blame, the lecturer saying that the low dives were tolerated for their political worth as vote makers.

The address was made at the Odeon before the congregation of the First Church of Spiritual Unity. Father Coffey's subject was the social evil question.

In the course of his remarks he declared that the project of segregation was absolutely impossible.

"It was tried in the early days by the Greeks and Romans and found to be impracticable," he said. "You cannot wall this evil up. The reason for it is that it is human nature. You cannot wall up human nature, therefore it is impossible to stamp out this evil."

"There is a remedy, however. We can curb it. We must treat these fallen creatures with more kindness. Correction of this evil is a work that devolves upon religion. Kind words for these poor creatures are never without their good effects, and we must strive to interest them and win them over to better lives."

"We must also strike to stamp out the roots of this evil—those dives and miserable dance halls. Fostered by political bodies for their political worth as vote-makers, these places invite, so flagrant has the evil become that it is flaunted even upon the midway of our Union Station. The police close their eyes to it, it seems, and allow it to stalk shamelessly in the community."

Father Coffey mentioned having made a similar statement in regard to the laxity of the police at the Union Station on a previous occasion, and that it was vigorously denied by a member of the Police Department assigned to duty at the station.

"This officer denied that the evil persons plied upon the station property," said Father Coffey. "I went to the station shortly afterwards and saw the officer holding a social conversation with several of these women."

WOMAN RETURNS STOLEN GOODS.

Articles Taken From a Boarding-House Brought Back by Person Suspected of Theft.

Mrs. Jeremiah O'Neill of No. 231 St. Vincent avenue, from whose residence several articles were stolen last Wednesday, was surprised yesterday when the woman whom she suspected of the theft came to her home and returned many of them.

The woman who is known to Mrs. O'Neill as Mrs. Hill, stated that she would return the balance of the stolen articles to-day. She also told Mrs. O'Neill that she was residing at No. 222 St. Charles street.

Mrs. O'Neill notified the police of the return of the goods and also told them of the woman's statements regarding her residence.

Inquiring at No. 222 St. Charles street, the police could not find a woman of that name. Mrs. Richard Frin, who resides at that number, stated that a woman answering the description of Mrs. Hill and her daughter were at her residence on Friday and wanted to rent a room. She told the police that the woman's name was Farrell and not Hill, and that she formerly kept a boarding-house on South Jefferson avenue.

The woman who gave her name as Mrs. Hill came to Mrs. O'Neill's home last Wednesday, stating that she was from Springfield, Mo. Accompanying her were a boy and a girl. Mrs. O'Neill rented a room to them. On the following day Mrs. Hill disappeared. Shortly afterwards it was found that property belonging to Mrs. O'Neill and Miss Malquist Stevens, a boarder, were missing.

Mrs. O'Neill yesterday told the police that she would not prosecute the woman if she were arrested. Miss Stevens takes a different view of the matter, and will.

geographical position and its very trifling holdings of Russian and Japanese securities, the outbreak of the war between these countries did not appeal with the same force as to markets which have direct monetary interests, the outbreak of hostilities was not devoid of influence.

The interrelationship of money markets is well understood in these days. Even if New York has no direct connection with the Russian security markets, both St. Petersburg and New York have intimate associations with the markets of London, Paris and Berlin, and the agitation of these latter through the Russian liquidation found some reflection here.

IN STRONG HANDS.

Considered in a broad way, the developments of the week and the attendant results serve to clarify further the situation and to emphasize certain conclusions which have heretofore been reached. That the market displayed stability in the face of unusual disturbances indicates clearly enough that the general public has nothing whatever to do with the speculative position. It is clear that had the results of the week's end would have been a vastly different tale to the one which is told. Men now, in noting the general moderation of price recessions in stocks, attribute it to the fundamental strength of the situation. In amplifying these views attention is generally called to the fact that events clearly demonstrate that the floating mass of securities are in strong hands, and that those who hold them are under no necessity to sell.

This diagnosis of the situation seems to be reasonably accurate. Still there are two sides to a medal. If in the present instance the situation is held to be strong because the great interests have the stocks and the public have them not, it would assuredly be weakened if the conditions were reversed. That the market is technically strengthened when the "big men" hold the stocks and are able to carry them and the public is out of Wall street is doubtless true enough. With equal accuracy and for the same reasons, however, the market might be designated as

STOCK MARKET BEARS UP WELL.

In the Face of Cotton Panic and War in Orient, Securities Remain Fairly Steady.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL. New York, Feb. 14.—In the face of many developments of an adverse nature, the speculative stock market bore up exceedingly well last week. Security markets are not often called upon to withstand at one and the same time such a combination of unfavorable events as an outbreak of war between two important nations, a domestic disaster which swept out of existence property valued at approximately $100,000,000 and a series of what, in other days, would constitute panics in a most important staple commodity. For a time it certainly looked as though each wild convulsion in the cotton market spelled ruin, and the fear of disaster in that quarter contributed not a little to the general disquietude.

New York, in several respects, seemed to have more to contend with of an unfavorable character than most of the European markets. Although from its "strong" because the public does not own any securities, will not buy any and because the big men cannot sell and therefore must carry the burden.

Assuredly the developments of the week call for a continuance of caution and conservatism. War involves the destruction of property, and, though there are persons in Wall street and elsewhere who believe there are compensatory benefits to a noncombatant called upon to supply various munitions to the stimulus thus created has never yet failed to be temporary, and in the end has ever been offset by the loss of material wealth, swept out of existence in the contest.
